22 January 2013: The Board of 3Q Holdings Limited (ASX: TQH) today confirmed the date on which it has agreed with the Australian Securities Exchange that it will delist from the ASX, following approval from shareholders for that course of action at the recent Annual General Meeting.

The company will delist on Tuesday 12 February 2013.

The last day for trading TQH shares on the ASX will be the close of trading on Tuesday 5 February 2013, allowing settlement of those trades to take place on the standard T+3 basis, prior to the delisting of the Company on Tuesday 12 February 2013.

Background to the Delisting

As noted at the time of the AGM, the Board considers that de-listing of the Company is appropriate given:

- (a) The current and historical lack of liquidity in the Company's shares;
- (b) The ASX market price of the Company's shares does not accurately reflect the inherent value of those shares or of the Company; and
- (c) The market capitalisation of the Company based on the ASX market price of the Company's shares impairs the Company's ability to derive value from its technologies in negotiations with commercial partners.

These factors have significantly constrained the Board's ability to operate the business effectively and have limited the growth opportunities available to the Company. Therefore, the Board no longer considers that maintaining the Company's listing on ASX is beneficial or in the best interests of the Company and its shareholders.

The effects of de-listing will be:

- the Company's share price and trading history will no longer be available on the ASX website or newspapers and stock ticker services;
- (b) the Listing Rules will cease to apply to the Company. Shareholders will nevertheless retain the protections afforded to them under the Corporations Act, and the Company will continue to be subject to its obligations under the Corporations Act and the Company's Constitution;
- (c) shareholders will no longer be able to trade their shares on the ASX; and
- (d) shareholders wishing to trade their shares after delisting occurs will be entitled to transfer their shares off-market to a willing third party purchaser in accordance with the Company's Constitution. Such a third party market may not be liquid and shareholders will be personally responsible for sourcing potential purchasers.

On-Market Buyback

Prior to delisting taking place, the Company has been authorised to conduct an on-market buyback of up to 30 million shares, representing approximately 20% of the current issued capital.

In relation to that buyback:

- (a) The maximum percentage of shares to be bought back is 20% (or around 30 million shares).
- (b) There is no guarantee that the Company will acquire any shares under the buyback, and all acquisitions are at the discretion of the Board.

Finally, for as long after delisting as the Company remains a disclosing entity for the purposes of the Corporations Act, the Company will make available all necessary disclosures about the Company and the operations of the business on its website, at http://www.threeq.com.au.
